Event Description

Accelerating Renewable Heating and Cooling for a Decarbonised Europe

Join us for the final event of the REDI4HEAT project, where policymakers, industry leaders, energy experts, and local authorities will come together to explore the transformative outcomes of the project. This event will showcase key findings and recommendations designed to support the implementation of the Renewable Energy Directive (RED) provisions on heating and cooling, driving the transition towards a decarbonised energy sector in Europe.

Highlights will include the unveiling of the different activities developed during the project life and the main results produced, such as Strategic Policy Priorities for Heating and Cooling, Policy Adoption Scenarios, best practices, and practical toolboxes developed to empower public authorities at all levels. Participants will gain access to the Knowledge Sharing Centre and insights into capacity-building activities conducted in the project's target Member States.

This interactive conference will also focus on the replication potential of the REDI4HEAT initiative, offering opportunities for non-participating Member States to integrate project outcomes into their energy transition strategies. Don't miss this chance to be part of shaping a sustainable and renewable heating and cooling future for Europe.
